Insurance Premium Tax

There is currently no insurance premium tax applicable to capitalisation contracts in Finland.

Taxation of benefits or surrenders

In case the benefit is paid to the client, an increase in the contract value is "capital income". The basis for calculating the capital income is to subtract the amount of premiums paid from the value of the underlying assets at the time of surrender.

For natural persons, such capital income is taxed at a rate of 30% for capital income amounts up to EUR 30,000 per year and 34% for capital income amounts above EUR 30,000 per year.

For legal entities, an increase in the contract value is to be taxed as capital income at a rate of 20%.

Inheritance Tax

In case of death of the client the contract value exceeding EUR 35,000 are included in the taxable total estate value. If the beneficiary of such an indemnity is a more distant relative or a non-relative, the receipt of indemnity is taxed as capital income, and the beneficiary will have to pay income tax. In these circumstances, no assessment of inheritance tax is involved.

As of 1 January 2018, insurance indemnities will be fully subject to inheritance tax.
